Woolworths discovery garden growing guide

You could use a small amount of natural pesticide to protect your plants. This round is all about encouraging pollination through bee-attracting seedlings. Once the seedlings have grown their second set of leaves, they will start to require some fertiliser. However, you also don't want soggy soil, so make sure your herbs and veggies have plenty of drainage. Use pots or planters: In very dry parts of Australia, growing herbs, veggies and flowers in pots or planters is a great way to help manage the watering. Sugar cane mulch or pea straw are particularly good for veggies, herbs, flowers and fruiting plants as they help suppress weeds and retain water, as well as rotting down over time, which increases the organic matter in the soil. Seed performance is subject to growing conditions. Once your seeds have sprouted, the seedlings need to be planted into a pot or garden bed so they can continue to grow and flourish. There are more gardening tips on the Bunnings website. Keep an eye out for snails as they love to eat fresh seedlings. This could be caused by various things. It is okay to plant out pots with mould on them as the bio pots will break down in the soil with time anyway. This is important as weeds compete for water and nutrients with your plants and can also attract unwanted insect pests. Take note of some handy tips and troubleshooting advice from a gardening expert, so your collecting efforts (and dollars) don't go to waste. Each seedling kit comes in a cardboard wrapper with useful information and instructions. Try to keep the soil just moist all the time. Deep watering is best as it encourages roots to grow down to the soil profile to access available water away from the soil surface, which can dry out quickly. Just be sure to follow the instructions on the packaging, as using too much can damage young seedlings. You could use the collector's tray which is specifically made for the seed pots ($4 from Woolworths, while stocks last, limit of five per person per transaction). Fruiting plants (and trees) also require regular watering and again, the frequency varies depending on the position that they are in. Coco pellet - a pod made from coconut husk. Image: Woolworths. Plant label - a coloured cardboard label that will identify what's growing in each pot. When the seedlings have grown and opened their second set of leaves, they are large enough to be planted elsewhere. If you use a premium potting mix, this will not be required as fertiliser is included in the mix already. Add mulch: This can help your plants retain water and prevent weeds. Remember to read the instructions carefully. Have a look online or in a good gardening book to see when the best time of year is for each plant type. There are 24 different vegetable, herb and flower seeds to collect: spring onion, cabbage, carrots, cherry tomatoes, lettuce, spinach, silverbeet, red basil, chives, thyme, oregano, lemon balm, sage, cornflower, salvia, dianthus, phacelia, lavender, poppy, aster, zinnia, pansy and Swan River daisy. The coco pellet was packed down too tightly. The pot is made of plant fibres. Once a little plant appears, a seed has germinated! After germination you can find instructions on the inside of the Woolworths Discovery Garden seedling cardboard wrapper or at woolworths.com.au/discoverygarden. The Woolworths Discovery Garden site also gives this advice in a list of frequently asked questions, a portion of which is reproduced below. The pot is made from plant fibres so the seedling roots easily grow through the sides and the bottom of the pot. Pesticides should only be applied by adults. Just how often varies depending on the position that they are in (e.g., if they are potted or planted in the ground and the soil type). You can wipe it away with a tissue. The pots were put somewhere too windy, too cold or too hot. Add organic material: Adding organic material such as compost or rotted manure can help the soil hold more moisture and provides nutrients for your plants to grow. The seeds weren't covered in enough soil. The Woolworths Discovery Garden seedling kit. Your pop-out seed name will have an estimated harvest time. Woolworths Discovery Garden is back from Wednesday, 10 February. However, some seeds may not germinate and if you're still not seeing a seedling, it could be because: The soil hasn't been wet enough or has been too wet. Woolworths relished in the good green vibe when the supermarket chain first launched the Discovery Garden campaign in 2019, saying it hoped the promotion would inspire a new generation of green thumbs. Flower seedlings in particular can look great when planted all together and in bloom. Most seeds should sprout within one to two weeks of being planted, though some may take longer. Is your kitchen windowsill about to be bristling with Woolworths Discovery Garden pots? Image: B Salmon/Shutterstock.com Bio pots will grow mould if they are sitting wet and not draining freely after they have been watered. Make sure you don't leave your little seedling pot anywhere too damp otherwise you might experience mould or little mushrooms starting to appear during the germination process. When planting them, use some granular fertiliser or slow release fertiliser mixed into the soil. If the roots are outgrowing the pot, it's time to repot them. Pot - a small seedling pot for putting the soil and seeds into. Image: Joshua Resnick/Shutterstock.com Herbs and veggies require regular watering. Using a good quality premium potting mix is also best as all the nutrients required to get a good result are already included. However, there are lots of factors that can influence how quickly a plant reaches maturity. Or put the pot on a clean saucer and in a light, warm place. Yes, you don't need to remove the plant from the pot. To help you get the best value from your collecting efforts, take note of lessons learned in the first round of Discovery Garden when Canstar asked Bunnings gardening expert Mill Wallasvaara to help solve some of the potential pain points. The promotional campaign sees shoppers receive one seedling kit with every $30 they spend. It could be a good idea to plant these next to your other growing herbs and vegetables to help them grow too. The soil pellet is made of coconut husk. There are a number of different seeds that are known to help out some of our favourite pollinators: chives, cornflower, lemon balm, oregano, red basil, sage, thyme, aster, lavender, phacelia, poppy, salvia, Swan River daisy, zinnia, spring onion, cabbage, carrot, cherry tomatoes, lettuce, silverbeet and spinach. The best way to check if plants need watering is to put your finger into the soil - if it is moist then the plants are happy. If you've got a small backyard or balcony, it's a good idea to stagger edible seed plantings a little so you can harvest them over longer periods of time. You might be over- or under-watering or your plant might be getting too much or not enough light. Alternatively, a liquid fertiliser can be used once or twice a week, but again make sure to follow the instructions. As a general guide, herbs and veggies will require daily watering to keep them actively growing. However, if you have good quality soil (one that contains good organic matter and water holding ability), a deep watering (making sure the root system is completely drenched) once to twice a week will be enough in most cases. Add mulch on top of the soil of your plants to help keep the potting mix moist and a saucer to catch the run-off water. Check the soil in the morning and at night to ensure it's not too dry. One kit is given to shoppers every time they spend $30. However, if you've got a more spacious garden or plenty of pots to plant them in, you can plant them all at once. Seed mat - a small number of seeds of the same plant type e.g. herb or vegetable, are embedded in paper. No, just as long as it has drainage holes. Try moving the seedlings to a sunnier position like a windowsill and let the pots drain freely so they aren't sitting in a saucer of water.
