If your kids are like mine, this game could get crinkled or ripped in one round. Our human body matching game printable is a fun activity that also gives education to children. Introducing the human body system and organs is not so easy for the younger learners. The only supplies you need to make this activity happen is Printer Scissors Lamination (Optional) To prep this activity you can start by printing the game on paper. Laminating can prevent this from happening, at least for a long while. Mix up the cards and divide cards up between players. This can also help prevent challenges and insecurities later in life. To download this human body matching game - just click on the square image below. For children that need more of an introduction, you could place the body mat in front of the child. I prefer to laminate because it preserves the life of the activity. Strengthen fine motor skills with this exciting activity! Alternative Ideas Obviously you can play however you would like with this game, but a few other ideas include: You could print multiple body part cards and play with a traditional matching game style. The printable contains : 6 parts of our human body organ 6 body where you can match where those organs are located in our body. If you want to download you have to send your own contributions. Not only is important for the purpose for the being able to label our body parts, but also for little movers to be able to be their best at body control and movement control. Playing while learning, isn't it a great idea? Cut each of the body part cards out. AMAZON ASSOCIATE. As an Amazon Associate I earn from qualifying purchases.
