Father corapi catechism of the catholic church

The Catechism of the Catholic Church: The Teaching of Jesus Christ By Father John Corapi SOLT, STD (under Bishop William K. Weigand) A 50 Part essential Catholic teaching covering The Catechism of the Catholic Church in almost 58 Hours. "As Seen on EWTN, this major series on the Catechism of the Catholic Church is Father John Corapi's greatest work of teaching and preaching. It is currently the only series of its kind in scope and depth. Consisting of 50 lectures, approximately one hour each, this series synthesizes the Catholic Church's official Catechism. "A sure norm for teaching the faith," as Pope John Paul II called it, the Catechism of the Catholic Church is the benchmark for all Catholic doctrinal and moral teaching . Broadcast and used in over 100 countries throughout the world, this series by Father John Corapi has helped countless people to love and know the Catholic faith better. There is also an 8 Hour Question and Answer Series which were an integral part of the original presentation . Many of the questions cover controversial issues, some of which are difficult to find straight forward answers to in today's timid and politically correct atmosphere. Fr. Corapi answers the questions in his usual candid, simple, humorous, and often courageous style. An invaluable teaching tool." (Source: The Teaching of Jesus Christ . "Only the Catholic Church even claims that their religion was started in 33 AD. No other religion can trace their roots back to 33 AD, except our Catholic Faith. So Who Started the Catholic Church? Nobody is mentioned except Jesus, Jesus Christ Himself. For 1500 years, there was only The Catholic Church. There were no other Christian religions." - Fr. (current membership status unknown)Senior postingOrdinationMay 26, 1991 John Anthony Corapi (born May 20, 1947), formerly known as Fr. John Corapi, is an inactive Catholic priest of the Society of Our Lady of the Most Holy Trinity (S.O.L.T.) in the United States. He was popular in the early 2000s for his regular appearances on Catholic television and his syndicated daily Catholic radio show. He published instructional media including books, DVDs, and websites, and made speaking appearances throughout the world.[1][2] In 2005, Corapi was awarded $2.7 million USD for his role as a whistleblower in a qui tam False Claims Act lawsuit against Redding Medical Center in California. This resulted in an overall $24 million USD payment to defrauded patients.[3] In 2011, Corapi was removed by his order from public ministry as a priest following allegations of misconduct, which he denied.[4][5] By 2012, his website and his accounts on Facebook and Twitter had been closed.[6] As of 2021, no official information is available about John Corapi's activity, such as whether he was laicized or whether he is still affiliated with his order. A LinkedIn page appears to indicate that he might have pursued an occupation as a writer of fiction and non-fiction and a speaker for non-religious events.[7] However, a 2015 article published by Church Militant reported that he remained in the priesthood and was "re-establishing his spiritual life" [8] Life Early years Corapi was born and grew up in Hudson, New York. In high school, he was a football player and an undistinguished student. In 1965, he entered the missionary community the Society of Our Lady of the Most Holy Trinity and on May 26, 1990, was ordained a deacon by René Henry Gracida, Bishop of Corpus Christi, Texas.[11] He earned an S.T.B. degree from the University of Navarre in Pamplona, Spain. Priesthood On Trinity Sunday, May 26, 1991, Pope John Paul II ordained Corapi to the priesthood. Corapi says that Mother Teresa of Calcutta stood behind him at his ordination, and that he saw a vision of the Virgin Mary smelling lilacs on that day.[9]:59 Corapi's first assignments as a priest were at parishes in Hudson, New York and Robstown, Texas.[11] Later, in the Catholic Diocese of Sacramento, he became the Director of Catholic Faith Formation and of the Bishop's Project on the Catechism of the Catholic Church. Corapi earned a doctorate in dogmatic theology from the University of Navarre.[9]:58–59 He became a regular contributor to the EWTN television and radio networks. In 2008, Corapi curtailed his public appearances for reasons of health, but continued to produce audio and video programs from his studio in Montana. On August 15, 2009, Corapi made his first public appearance in over a year in Buffalo, New York for his "Lord and Giver of Life" conference at HSBC Arena. He completed and taped several conferences in 2010, including at San Antonio, Texas; St. Louis, Missouri; and Cincinnati, Ohio.[12] In subsequent months, Corapi preached sermons on the dangers of socialism.[citation needed] Qui tam False Claims Act lawsuit Further information: Tenet Healthcare In 2002 Corapi fled a qui tam False Claims Act lawsuit against Redding Medical Center cardiologist Chae Hyun Moon informed Corapi that year that he was in immediate need of triple bypass surgery, but then told Corapi that the procedure could wait three weeks. Corapi decided to seek other medical advice; his second doctor determined that he had perfectly clear arteries. Corapi ultimately went to the FBI and filed the suit that was the basis of an FBI raid and a multi-year investigation into Moon's practice.[13] In 2005 the United States Department of Justice reached a settlement with four cardiologists and Tenet Healthcare, the owner of Redding Hospital, in part due to the investigation following Corapi's initial complaint. Three physicians settled for a total of $24 million USD. Moon, the target of Corapi's lawsuit, paid $1.4 million USD and agreed never to perform cardiology procedures or surgeries on Medicare, Medi-Cal or Tricare patients.[3] Moon's medical license was eventually revoked in 2007 for gross negligence, among other charges. Corapi was awarded $2,712,281 USD for his role as a whistleblower in the False Claims Act lawsuit, as well as the $500,000 USD he and his friend were awarded for the insurance case they filed.[14] Stephen Klaidman explored Corapi's role as a whistle blower in his non-fiction book about the case, Coronary. Allegations of misconduct Administrative leave In March 2011, Bishop William Mulvey of Corpus Christi, Texas, instructed the SOLT religious community to appoint two independent priests to investigate allegations by a former employee that Corapi had been in a relationship with her and was a drug addict. On March 18, 2011, Corapi was placed on administrative leave by his religious superior, Father Gerald Sheehan. Corapi denied the allegations and said the process was flawed.[15] Sheehan issued a statement emphasizing that the suspension "in no way implies Father Corapi is guilty of the allegation." [15] Sheehan said that a fact-finding committee was formed consisting of two members of religious orders and a lay person. Its work was hampered by Corapi's refusal to release witnesses from non-disclosure agreements and the breach of contract lawsuit he filed against the principal accuser.[16] The television network EWTN suspended broadcasts by Corapi when he was placed on leave.[17] Leaving priestly ministry On June 17, 2011, Corapi announced that he would no longer engage in public ministry as a priest. On a new website, titled "The Black Sheep Dog", Corapi wrote: There are certain persons in authority in the Church that want me gone, and I shall be gone...They can't prove I'm guilty of the things alleged because I'm not, and they can't prove I'm innocent because that is simply illogical and impossible...My canon lawyer and my civil lawyers have concluded that I cannot receive a fair and just hearing under the Church's present process. The Church will conclude that I am not cooperating with the process because I refuse to give up all of my civil and human rights in order to hold harmless anyone who chooses to say defamatory and actionable things against me with no downside to them...I am, indeed, not ready to be extinguished. Under the name "The Black Sheep Dog," I shall be with you through radio broadcasts and writing. My autobiography, The Black Sheep Dog, is almost ready for publication. My topics will be broader than in the past, and my audience likewise is apt to be broader. I'll do what I can under the circumstances.[4] On July 5, 2011, Father Gerald Sheehan, Corapi's religious superior in the Society of Our Lady of the Trinity, released a press statement accusing Corapi of drug and alcohol abuse, "sexting", having an affair with a former prostitute, and violating his promise of poverty as a perpetually professed member of the society by owning more than $1 million in real estate, numerous luxury vehicles, motorcycles, an ATV, a boat dock, and several motor boats. He stated, "SOLT's prior direction to Fr. John Corapi not to engage in any preaching or teaching, the celebration of the sacraments or other public ministry continues. Catholics should understand that SOLT does not consider Fr. John Corapi as fit for ministry." [18] On July 7, 2011, Corapi announced that he would not obey Sheehan's order to relocate from Montana and take up residence in a house of the society. According to a Catholic News Service report, he said he would not return to the order, and that he had resigned from the priesthood on June 17, two days short of the 20th anniversary of his ordination.[19] I resigned because the process used by the church is grossly unjust, and, hence, immoral. I resigned because I had no chance from the beginning of a fair and just hearing. As I have indicated from the beginning of all this, I am not extinguished! If I were to commit to the suggestion of the society, then I would essentially crawl under a rock and wait to die.[19] Activity post-2011 As of 2021, no official information is available about John Corapi's activity, such as whether he was laicized or whether he is currently affiliated with S.O.L.T. or any religious order. A LinkedIn page appears to indicate that since 2011, Corapi has pursued an occupation as a writer of fiction and non-fiction and a speaker for non-religious events.[20] However, a 2015 article by Matt Abbott, published by Church Militant, reported that according to "a reliable source", Corapi "remains in the priesthood and is re-establishing his spiritual life. There's no indication he'll be returning to public life anytime soon, if ever." [8] In 2021, Abbott posted an update quoting the Catholic lay evangelist and author Jesse Romero as saying that in 2016, Romero had unofficially been told by S.O.L.T.'s then-superior general that Corapi had "reconciled with his order", "was living the life of a monk in a monastery", was practicing "full-time prayer and penance", "had medical problems", and "will never speak in public again—by his choice and his superior's choice as well."
