His texts touch Hill's pregnancy and tumult within his former group the Fugees, along with themes of love and God. The title of the album was inspired by the autobiographical novel The Education of Sonny Carson and The Mis-Education of the Negro by Carter G. Woodson. After the tour with the Fugees, Hill became involved in a romantic relationship with Jamaican entrepreneur Rohan Marley, and shortly after, became pregnant with their child. This pregnancy, as well as other circumstances of his life, inspired Hill to make a solo album. Recording sessions for the album took place from late 1997 to June 1998 mainly at Tuff Gong Studios in Kingston, while Hill collaborated with a group of musicians known as New Ark for songwriting and production. The album debuted in the first place on the Billboard 200 chart, selling 422,624 copies in its first week, which broke a record for first week sales by a female artist. He was promoted with the release of successful singles "Doo Wop (That Thing)", "Ex-Factor", and "Everything", while "Lost Ones" and "Can't Take My Eyes Off You" were released as promotional singles. [1] To further promote the album, Hill Saturday Night Live and the Billboard Music Awards before embarking on a concert tour around the world. The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill was one of the most acclaimed albums of 1998, as most critics praised the presentation of Lauryn Hill earned 10 nominations, winning five awards, making Hill the first woman to receive that many nominations and awards in one night. The success of the album pushed Hill to the international levelAnd it helped bring Hip Hop and Neo Soul to the forefront of popular music. New Ark, however, Felt Hill and his record label did not properly credit the band on the album; One case filed by the Group was settled out of court in 2001. Since its release of the album pushed Hill to the international levelAnd it helped bring Hip Hop and Neo Soul to the forefront of popular music. the album has been ranked in numerous best-album lists, with a number of critics regarding one of the greatest albums of the 90s, as well as One of the greatest albums of all time. Among its honors are inclusion in the 500 largest Rolling Stone Magazine albums of all time, Harvard University's Loebs Music Library, the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History, and the Library of Congress National Recording Register. In 2021, the album was certified Diamond by the American Recording Industry Association, for estimated sales of 10 million copies, making it one of the best-selling album by a female rapper, [3] and the best-selling neo-soul album of all time. [4] It remains the only studio album on the hill. Background In 1996, Lauryn Hill met Rohan Marley while visiting as a member of the Refugees. The two gradually formed a close relationship, and while you were on tour, the hill became pregnant with her son. [5] Pregnancy and other circumstances in her life inspired her to record a solo album. After contributing to fellow Fugees Member Wyclef Jean's Record Only Wyclef Jeans introduces Carnival, Hill had time off from tour and recording due to her pregnancy and writer's blockages. [6] This pregnancy, however, the creativity of renewed hill, while recalling in an interview several years later: "When some women are pregnant, their hair and their nails grow, but for me it was my mind and ability to create. I had the desire to write in âa ability I haven't done in a while. I don't know if it's a hormonal or emotional thing...I was very much in touch with my feelings at that time. " Of the early writing process, said the hill, "Every time I got disappointed, every time I got disappointed, every time I learned, I just wrote a song." [7] While inspired, Hill wrote over thirty songs in his penthouse studio in South Orange, New Jersey. [8] Many of these songs have drawn turbulence in the Fulges, as well as past love experiences. [9] In the summer of 1997, as the hill was to give birth to her first child, she was asked to write a song for Gospel Musician Cece Winans. [8] Several months later, she went to Detroit to work with the soul single "a rose is still a rose". Franklin, write and produce His single "a rose is still a rose". owing Hill. [10] Shortly after this, Hill wrote work for Whitney Houston. [11] After writing songs for artists in the Gospel, Hip-Hop and R & B, you designed on these influences and experiences to record the rude of the Lauryn hill. [12] Registration and production Julian Marley Marley In 2010) it was one of the different members of the Bob Marley family who visited the album ns in Jamaica. Hill began to record the miseducation at the end of 1997 at Chung King Studios in New York, [13] and completed the work of him in June 1998 at Tuff Gong Studios in Kingston, in Jamaica. [14] In an interview, Hill described the first day of registration, stating: "The first day in the studio ordered each instrument I ever fell in love with Harps, ropes, timpani, organs, Clarinetti It was mine mine Idea to register it, so the human element remained inside. I didn't want it to be too technically perfect. "[15] Initially, Jean did not claim Hill recorded a solo album, but in the end he was offered to help as a producer, who He did not accept. [16] [17] In addition to doing work in Chung King Studios, Hill also recorded Perfect Pair Studios in New Jersey, as well as Sony Studios, [18] with some songs with different elements recorded in several studies. "[21] Columbia Records considered the entrance of an external producer for the album and spoke in advance with the Wu-Tang Clan Rza. However, HILL was excited to write, organize and produce the album itself: "It would have been more difficult to articulate with other people. Hey, it's my album. Who can tell my story better than me? [22] Recalled I use Records Chris Swartz ensuring his artistic freedom during the registration of the album: "I had the total control of the album. Chris Swartz in Ruffhouse, my label, said: "Listen, you've never done anything stupid so far, so let you make your thing". [23] and lyrics "Lost Ones" On "Lost Ones", Hill punishes his former bandmates, directors and record critics. [24][25] She violently verses hardcore in a Caribbean patois before moving into a refrain that features [25][24][26] The hook of the song interpolates the dancehall of Sister Nancy of 1982 on "Bam Bam".[27] The track is built on narrow traps embellished with toasts and animated scratches.[27][28] Problems with reproduction of this file? See media help. A neo soul album[29][30] and R&B,[31] The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill incorporates musical styles such as soul, hip hop and reggae.[32] Some songs are based on the hip hop soul.[33] "When It Hurts So Bad" is musically old reggae mixed with the soul. While mostly in English, «Forgive Them Father» and «Lost Ones» are both sung in Patois, which is the most common dialect in Jamaica. Although strongly R&B, the song "Superstar" contains an interpolation of the "Light My Fire" rock song from the Doors. Hill said that "he didn't want to go out with a sound similar to that of the Fugees", but to create "something that was only and clearly a Lauryn Hill album".[23] He also said that he didn't want the sound of the album to be commercially attractive: "Today there is too much pressure to have successes. Artists look at Billboard instead of exploring themselves. Look at someon like Aretha, she didn't succeed with her first album, but she was able to grow and find herself. I wanted to make honest music. I don't like things being too perfect, or too shiny. People might criticize me for this, but I grew up listening to Al Green and Sam Cooke. When they touched an acute note, you really felt it.[34] "To Zion" is an emotional tribute to Hill's newborn son.[35] She makes a serenade to her son Zion with a lullaby describing in detail the professional pressure exerted on her to abort. [36] While Hill speaks frankly and frankly in contemplating whether or not to have a child, guitarist Carlos Santana sounds softly licked with acoustic guitar in the background. [26][35] «Nothing Even Matters» is a duet with singer R&B D'Angelo. [24] A dramatic ballad showed a brighter and more intimate perspective on love and relationships. [35] Problems to reproduce these files? See media help. Most of Hill's texts are about motherhood, Fugees, Remind, Love, Broken Heart and God. [8] Commenting on the Gospel is music inspired by gospels. In a way, a lot of this music turned out to be just this. During this album, I turned to the soft a lumber of the soft and the the Bible and wrote songs from which I drew comfort."[37] Some of the album, such as "Lost Ones", "Superstar", "Ex-Factor" and "Forgive Them Father", were widely hypothesized as direct attacks against members of the Fugee Wyclef and Pras.[38][39] "Ex-Factor" was originally intended for another artist, but Hill decided to keep it. to its personal content.[40] Although much of the love

" 42] "A Sion", one of the most introspective tracks on the album, spoke about how the hill family comes to her career [24] and her decision to have her first child, although many at the time encouraged her to terminate her pregnancy, so as not to conflict with her burgoning career. [39] In an interview he discussed the origin and meaning of the song, commenting "the names wouldn't come up when I was ready to have it. The only name that came to me was Zion. I was like is Zion too much of a burden to bear? But this kid, man. I would say he delivered me personally from my emotional and spiritual drought. He just reinstated my newness. When he was born, I felt like I was born again. "I wanted to be a revolutionary song about a spiritual movement, and also about my spiritual change, going from place to place because of my son. "[44] Throughout Lauryn Hill's rude, several interludes of a teacher who talks about what is implied to being a class of children in the New Jersey living room of Hill Home. [39] The hill asked Baraka to speak to the children about the concept of love, to which he improvised in the concept of love, to which he im wider community working to redefine itself. "[25] Along with Woodson's book, the album's tille was inspired by the film and autobiographical novel Sonny Carson's education. Often the reviewers presentation of the hill praised the view of a female on life and love. [78] Eric Weisbard from Spin called him a "Gener-Bender" whose confident singing and rapper was balanced by vulnerable themes and feelings. [28] In the New York Times, Ann Powers found him "miraculous" and "exceptional" for the hill to use "his faith, based more on experience and feeling than on doctrine", as a mediat of the sould in music that touches the essence of the soul. "[79] Allmusic's John Bush was impressed with how he produced most of the album", not as a crossover record, but as a collection of overtly personal and political statements", while demonstrating "performing talents, Gamma vocals and Smarts songwriting". [24] David Browne, writing in Entertainment Weekly, called "An Album of Power Often strength and feeling", as well as "one of the rare hip-hop soul albums" not to lose focus with appearances for frivolous guests. Browne applauded Hill's artistic vision and credited her for "easily flowing from singing to rapper, evoking the past as she forged a future of her own." [118] [119] Jon Caramanica, writing in the Rolling Stone Album Guide (2004), defined him "a serious album, unpretentious and pleasantly slopped as any woman." Of the hip-hop filtered through a "feminist lens", the album pushed Hill to become a superstar «of epic proportions' and Â The focal point of Hip-hop crossover in mainstream ». [120] The music journalist Peter Shapiro mentioned him as â € œThe last cross-over album era hip-hop ». [121] While classifying it at 314 ° place in their «500 best albums of all time», Rolling Stone attributed to Hill the merit of having taken the soul of the 70s and to have made it «boomare and meaning for The hip-hop generation ». [122] The positioning of the miseducation to the tenth place in a revised edition in 2020 yielded the highest album of the list.
