To continue to benefit from our site, we ask you to confirm your identity in person. Thanks for collaboration. Thank you for your participation! We have decided to create the complete English summary that will help students learn and understand. Another year passes. The animals worked as slaves. Everyone believed he did it for his own goats and for this no one complained. The animals are invited to work on Sunday afternoon. If someone won't come, the ration of him would be halved. The harvest was not so good and it was easy to predict that the winter would have been hard. The progress on the windmill are slow and hardworking. The stones with which it must be built must be towed at the top of the quarry and thrown by there at the bottom, so that the stones can be crushed in the appropriate dimensions. It takes up to the end of the summer to accumulate enough stones to start building the windmill, which depends almost entirely from the enormous boxer effort, which works harder than ever. While the work for the collection and the windmill proceeds, the animals are located short of provisions. Products such as paraffin, seeds, manure and machinery could not be produced in the farm. The problem is resolved when Napoleon announces one day that the animal farm will conclude trade agreements with some of the surrounding farms. The hay and the grain of the farm will be sold, and to the hens is said that they will have to give up some of their eggs, a sacrifice that should be proud to do. Some animals doubt this move, seem to remember an agreement in the early days after the rebellion of never having anything to do with humans. Once again, squealer silences all doubts in the following days, informing them that this resolution has never been written. After this, Napoleon announced that no animal at him, would have come into contact with man and took the burden on sé. Mr. ... Whymper, a lawyer who lives in Willingdon, was named for this purpose. Squealer assured the animals that the resolution against trade and the use of money was a lie widespread by Snowball. The prosecutor comes every Monday, and the presence of him puts others very uncomfortable, but their doubts are mitigated by the pride of seeing Napoleon give orders to a man. Shortly thereafter, pigs move to the farm. They eat inrelax in the living room, and also sleep in the beds. some of the animals are very doubtful about this. clover consults the seven commandments on the gable wall, and asks Murael to read the fourth commandment, which states: "No animal will sleep in a bed with sheets." murael does not remember that the sheets were mentioned earlier. However, helped by the smooth words of squealer, assumes that it must have been wrong. She and the other animals accept her argument that pigs, like leaders, must have as much comfort as possible to facilitate their brain work. pigs also started sleeping an extra hour, the work on the windmill continues. animals are all extremely proud of their progress, except for benjamin, which does not express any opinion for or against the windmill. By November, the windmill is half finished. However, disaster strikes when a storm of time at night destroys it. animals gather around the ruin. Neapolitan is silent for a long time, before making the sudden and dramatic announcement that the windmill was destroyed by snowball. some prints of pigs that take away from the farm are discovered, and Neapolitan confirms that they belong to snowball. other animals are shocked that their former leader could do something like that. Neapolitan announces that the work on the reconstruction of the windmill will begin immediately. animal farm chapter 6 summary word means indignation - a feeling of right intermediate anger - a negotiator acting as a bond between the scapegoat parts - someone who is punished for the mistakes of the other wanderers - lack of clarity or distinct accentuated - stress or single out as important maliciously - the act of being evil in nature or plod effect - slowly walks with heavy quarry steps - a place, typically a big rock well read the extract below and answer the following questions: all that year, animals worked as slaves. but they were happy in their work, they complained neither effort nor sacrifice, well aware that all they did was for the benefit of themselves and of those of their kind that would come after them and not for a pack of identical human beings. during spring and summer they worked a sixty-hour week, and in August. (i) what has announced Neapolitan in August? (ii) how long has it been since the establishment of the farm of animals? how did summer wear, what unforeseen scarcity began to be heard? (iii) what new policy did Neapolitan do? the new policy has brought a vague discomfort among animals. What did they remember? (iv) who had acceptedact as an intermediary between the Animal Farm and the outside world? Describe it. (v) What aroused the pride of animals and made them reconcile with the new provision? In the meantime, what sudden decision was taken by pigs? pigs?Do we learn about Napoleon in this juncture? Answer: (i) In August, Napoleon announced that there would also be Sunday afternoon work. This work has been strictly voluntary, but any animal that would have been left by it would have its reduced rations of half. So so, it was found necessary to leave certain canceled tasks. (ii) While the summer wore, various unexpected deficiencies began to be heard. There was a need for paraffin oil, nails, strings, dogs for dogs and iron for horse shoes, none of which could be produced on the farm. Later there would also need seeds, artificial manure, as well as various tools and, finally, the windmill machinery. (iii) From now on, the animal farm would have engaged in the trade with nearby farms: not, of course, for any commercial purpose, but simply in order to obtain certain materials that were urgently necessary. The need of the windmill must overcome everything else, said Napoleon. It was, then making agreements to sell a pile of hay and part of the grain harvest of the current year, and later, if necessary more money, it should have been constituted by the sale of eggs, for which there was always a market in Willingdon. The hens, napoleon said, should welcome this sacrifice as a special contribution to the construction of the windmill. The animals were aware of a vague discomfort. Never have any business with human beings, never to engage in business, never use money. All animals reminded the passage of such resolutions or at least they thought they reminded him. (iv) Mr. Whimper, a lawyer who lives in Wellington, had agreed to act as an intermediary between the farm of animals and the outside world, and would have visited the farm every Monday morning to receive the instructions of him. He was a small man with the appearance with lateral mustaches, a lawyer in a very small way of business, but quite sharp to be realized before anyone else that the farm of animals would need a broker and that the commissions would be worth it of having. (v) The view of Napoleon, four-legged, delivering pulped orders, which stopped on two legs, broke their pride and partially reconciled with the new agreements. The pigs not only took their meals in the kitchen and used the living room as a recreation room, but he also slept in the beds. Napoleon was finding him ways of him breaking seven commandments, one after another and to get total power, he was taking advantage of all the animals of the farm farm and earned the money. Question 2. Read the extract shown below and answer the following questions: Å € Å, ~ (i) what had taken place To disturb the animalsÅ »Å" € (ii) What did you say squealer to rest animals? (iii) were the animals convinced with the discussion of him? (iv) What important development did you take up regarding pigs immediately after this accident? (v) you think this incident accident one of the seven commandments? If yes, what commandment was violated? Answer: (i) Napoleon's announcement of a new trading policy with nearby farms for essential material disturbed the tranquility of animals, because to treat humans was against their first resolutions. (ii) Streater assured animals that the resolution against impregnation in trade and the use of money had never been approved, or even suggested. It was a pure imagination probably traceable at first to the lies spread by the snowball. (iii) Few animals still feel weakly doubtful about the question, but the banner asked them cunningly, Å€ "You say this is not something you dreamed of, comrades? Do you have any records of that resolution? Is it written everywhere? Å€ "And since it was certainly true that nothing like this existed in writing, animals were satisfied that they had been wrong. This put all the animals to rest. (IV) Around this time, it was noted that the pigs moved suddenly on the farm and took their residence there. They were eating in the kitchen, relaxing in the living room and sleeping in the beds. (v) Yes, this incident had violated one of the seven commandments. It was the violation of the fourth commandment Å€ "No animal will sleep in a bed ... Question 3. Read the extract below and answer the questions below. Once again animals were aware of a vague discomfort. Never had it if it was among the first resolutions passed in that first triumphant. Meeting after Jones was expelled? All animals remembered the passage of these resolutions: or at least they thought they had remembered it. (i) Why do animals feel uncomfortable? (ii) What happened immediately after this extract? (iii) What were the seven commandments to which the animals respected? (iv) animals felt uncomfortable, but Napoleon had already made arrangements. What arrangements did they make? (v) Shortly before the extract, what did Napoleon ask the hens? Answer: (i) A Sunday morning, when animals gathered to receive their orders, Napoleon announced that he had decided on a new policy. From now on, the farm of animals would have engaged in trade with nearby farms. This announcement made animals uncomfortable. Immediately after this excerpt, the four young pigs who had protested when Napoleon abolished the meeting shook their voices shyly, but they were promptly silenced by a trembling slinging from dogs. Then, as usual, the sheep broke "the good legs, two bad legs! (III) The seven commandments of the farm of animals were what happens on two legs is an enemy. Whatever goes on four legs or has wings, he's a friend. No animal must wear clothes. No animal has to sleep in a bed. No animal will drink alcohol. No animals must haveany other animal. All animals are the same. (iv) Napoleon informed the other animals that there would be no need for any of the animals to come into contact with humans, humans, It would clearly be the most undesirable. He took all the weight on him. Mr. Whymper, a lawyer who lives in Willingdon, had agreed to act as an intermediary between the farm of animals and the outside world, and he would have visited the farm every Monday morning to receive the instructions of him. (v) Napoleon announced that the needs of the windmill excluded everything. It was, therefore, making agreements to sell a pile of hay and part of the grain harvest of a current year, and later, if necessary more money, it should have been constituted by the sale of eggs, for which there was always a Market in Willingdon. The hens, napoleon said, should welcome this sacrifice as a special contribution to the construction of the windmill. Question 4. Read the extract shown below and answer the following questions. The windmill presented unexpected difficulties. There was a good limestone hollow on the farm, and a lot of sand and concrete had been a problem that the animals could not at the first solve was how to break the stone in pieces of adequate sizes. (i) Who had presented the idea of the windmill? (ii) How was the windmill to help farm animals? (iii) why did Napoleon initially protested the windmill? (iv) How did the humans solved the problem of breaking the stone? (v) Why do animals have not solved problems like humans? With what solution did it come? Found in one of the resistant, so that all materials for construction were at hand. But the answer: (i) snowball, the pig, had presented the idea of the windmill. He was the project him dream of him. However, it has also become the reason for its ruin. (ii) snowball had the dream of building a windmill for the animal farm. He told animals that after completing the windmill, the animals would energy electricity and would have more comfortable lives because most of their work would have been completed much earlier and more efficiently. (iii) It is not clear why the Napoleon had initially protested the construction of the windmill. It seems that it was always towards the thoughts of the snowball and that they could have thrown him to go against the idea of the windmill. But later, he told the animals of the farm that really needed the windmill. (iv) The animals needed to break the stone to build the windmill. However, they were unable to do so because the humans made him with choices and foot of crowsbars and the animals were unable to handle these tools without being on the rear legs. (v) After weeks of vain efforts, the right idea occurs to someone - it was, to use the strength of gravity. Huge boulders, too big to use as they were, lying throughout the quarry bed. The And then all together, cows, horses, sheep, whatever animal could hold the rope - even pigs sometimes join at critical moments. They dragged them with desperate slowness down the slope to the top of the quarry, where they were overturned on the edge, to shatter pieces below. Carrying the stone when it was broken it was relatively simple. simple.
