The right hand is used to advance and remove the endoscope and its axial rotation. The American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy (Asge) guidelines should be followed for decisions regarding the management of antivombustive agents [2] or for the use of antibiotic prophylaxis in at-risk patients prior to endoscopy. [3] Sedation and sedation monitoring are used in most patients, not only to minimize discomfort, but also to provide amnesia for the procedure. Specimens are sent for histological, cytological or microbiological analysis based on the type of sample and clinical situation. Complications following esophagogastroduodenoscopy (EGD) are rare, occurring in less than 2% of patients. Most medications can continue and are usually taken with a small of water before endoscopy, although diabetes medications must be adjusted due to the fasting period before the procedure. The water blister is in second portion of the duodenum and examined while withdrawing the endoscope. After careful examination of the duodenum, pylorus, and antrum, the endoscope is retroflexed to visualize the gastric cardia and fundus. Thank you for choosing Waco Gastroenterology Associates! We appreciate you placing your trust in us. Esophagogastroduodenoscopy (EGD) is a diagnostic endoscopic procedure that includes visualization of the oropharynx, esophagus, stomach, and proximal duodenum. It is one of the most common procedures that a gastroenterologist performs. If sedation is needed for the procedure, personnel trained specifically in pediatric life support and airway management should also be readily available. In symptomatic children with known or suspected caustic ingestion, endoscopy should be performed within 24 hours. It is visible in a retroflexed endoscopic view. The endoscope is advanced along the lesser curvature towards the pylorus, but to fill the greater curvature with the endoscope is usually necessary before the cannulation of the pyloric canal. If the Z-line is displaced proximal to the gastroesophageal junction, biopsies should be taken for Barrett's esophagus.
