People will respond in various ways when you first tell them that you are a professional mermaid or aspire to be one. They might think it sounds funny, they might be amazed, they might even be confused. Then there are those who are mystified or interested. The sirens bring out the inner child of many eyes. They'll want to know what you do and how you got started. It is an unusual job and people are often fascinated by it. What exactly does a professional mermaid do? 1. Children's parties- mermaids are a mythical creature loved by children and are often required as party entertainment. These concerts involve swimming with children, playing with them, answering their questions, taking pictures with them, singing to them, or perhaps reading a book for them. There are many things mermaids can do at a child's party. 2. Beach party/pool/luxury event- Mermaids are great for eye-catching party guests. Add a little magic to an ordinary event. Sometimes they are there for the visual appeal and the environment they provide. Professional mermaids will make parties where they swim with guests, hang out and chat with them, and take pictures with them. For a dry event, the mermaid will not swim. 3. Festivals- The party can last days when it comes to festivals! The sirens will be parading, performing in a tank, putting on a show, or simply meeting and saying goodbye. Because sirens are colorful, exciting, and often sparkling, they make a great addition to any festival. 4. Teach mermaid swimming lessons - teaching lessons or doing workshops on how to swim like a mermaid and wear a tail with a monofin are other ways you can make money like a mermaid. You get to swim in the tail to demonstrate, but you can also network this way. Someone may ask to hire a mermaid and then you can promote yourself and your other services. The siren lessons are a great activity for hen parties and birthday parties. Provide queues and do a workshop to teach on mermaid swimming creates a fun and memorable experience, with lots of op. 5. The act/modelling- sirens are used in all kinds of media, from shows to advertisements and commercials, and for photography and art. If you have acting skills or are comfortable posing for long periods of time, then this can be the kind of mermaid job for you. For good swimmers being a double stunt for the aquatic scene in a movie is a way to make big money! 6. Running Aquarium Some aquariums have mermaids swimming in their tanks. This involves being surrounded by a real life of the ocean, sometimes even sharks. Aquarium mermaids entertain guests by swimming around, doing tricks, waving, and blowing bubble kisses to guests. Sometimes aquariums will make mermaid meet and greet where you can take pictures and talk to a 7. Brand Ambassador/Influencer You can use your online mermaid platform to make money only being a representative of a brand or company. Influtors are enthusiastic individuals who use their experience of a subject/influence the purchasing decisions that people make. This involves regular publication to social media and keeping followers engaged on a specific subject, whether it be siren, environmental activism, a product, or clothing brand. brand ambassadors can make a commission when people invest in what they advertise. 8. mermaid boss- run your own business siren is a great way to diversify your income at the top of being a mermaid at events, you can sell mermaid products like sirens code, join affiliate programs and make commissions (check aquamermaid affiliate program.) build a team of sirens and book a lot of events and lessons of siren swimming. renting siren queue can be a good source of income. 9. Athlete/competitive siren shows your swimming and break skills in local, national and international competitions. perform choreography in a giant aquarium with technical moves. control the world championship of mermaid. Moreover, there are other competitions such as miss mermaid international, a competition contest contest competition contest, including underwater flooding, sealing swimming/distance, catwalk and talented show. These competitions offer the opportunity to travel. win titles and notoriety to get the sponsorship and a product approval contract. This helps you build your personal brand to get more contracts of siren. What is professional training of sirens? being a mermaid to live could seem like a dream come true, but it takes more than a magical spell to make it happen. being a mermaid is not a walk in the park, or I have to say swim in the sea. like anything, it requires hard work, dedication and motivation. the first step to become a professional mermaid is obviously becoming a mermaid. to become a mermaid: be a good swimmer get a tail and monofin, get comfortable in it, practice swimming in it work on underwater tricks practice the hold of breath posing on land and in water do or buy mermaid accessories for your costume after having experience swimming in a mermaid tail you can work to transform it into your career. no matter where you work, you want to have relevant experience. outside of being able to swim and act as a mermaid, there are other experiences and certifications that are advantageous to get siren works. certifications: certification shield or freediver life protection certification CPR/first aid/AED certification experience: athletic swimming teaching swimming work with children working events/active parts / singing / Stand-up comedy synchronized swimming / ballet modeling marine biology how to create a siren wallet when you are ready to put out there, you will need to make aA portfolio shows how it stands out in a sea of other candidates. Portfolios are collections of their own work and andIn that case, they'd be all your best mermaid photos. You want to show that you are tuned to be underwater, you can pose gracefully, and you can control facial expressions underwater. You also want them to see your tail and all your mermaid dress.Â©©©© Â©©©© Â©©© Â©©© Â©©© Â©© Â© Tips for making a photo portfolio: Current photos - The photos used must be recent. You should have the same look in the photos as you do when sending your wallet to someone. Your look in the photos should be the same/similar look you'll use for an event. Best Quality Pictures - Make sure you use only the best photos. It's worth hiring a professional photographer. You need the right lighting and angles. NO SELFIES, or "shelfies", as we call them in the world of mermaids. Demonstrate Underwater Comfort - Use photos that show you're adapted to being underwater: you can control facial expressions and hold poses underwater. You need to be able to demonstrate that you can hold your breath underwater without holding all your cheeks. They also want to show that you can open your eyes underwater. Variety â You don't want all your photos to come from one photo shoot. You will need variety in your photos. Include underwater photos, photos on the mainland, photos on the beach, photos in the pool with children, and photos of events you have done. If you have multiple tails and mermaid costumes, the show them out too. Include only photos of the looks you can offer at the moment. Do not include photos of yourself with a friend's tail in your portfolio, otherwise the client may expect you to wear it to their event. Smile - It's okay if you look more serious or artistic in some photos, but you should definitely include a lot of photos where you look happy and smile. People want to hire friendly sirens that can be sparkling. Use relevant images- If your main interest is to be a mermaid for children's parties, show yourself to interact with children. If you want to be a mermaid in an aquarium, then show pictures of you posing underwater. If you have worked in a tank before then you should include those pictures. Show the whole body- Show the whole tail and take pictures from different angles. Include full-body photos and photos on your side. Sitting on the side with the tail stretched is the most flattering pose. Check out our guide to the siren posing. The photos were taken during the day- You do not want to use the photos taken at night because they are darker and the details will be harder to distinguish. If you're brand new and don't have any photos, I suggest you donate your services for free to a charity event in exchange for permission to take photos to build your portfolio. This is a great way to gain experience and build a large portfolio. 2. Tips for a demo reel Along with a wallet, it is helpful to make a demo reel. A demo reel is a video that shows off your skills, and should be kept under two minutes. If there are other people in the video, video, they want to make sure they don't start showing them. You should make the first appearance, so they know it's about you. The demo reel should show you have control under water, can hold your breath, make a proper dolphin kick, can make tricks, and express emotions without letting your cheeks fill in air. Include videos where you show tricks like spin, flip and bubble rings. You can also demonstrate how to interact with guests if you were in a tank aquarium. You can wave and blow bubble kisses and smile at the camera. A demo roller gives you a good chance to show your costume. You should let the whole queue see you. The video should be quite clear that other details, such as makeup and accessories, can be seen too. At the bottom of the screen, you need to include your name, your specialty and location for which you are applying. You can use the text in other areas of the video to include any certifications you have or any further information. How to distinguish yourself from all other sirens Find your mersona Whether you're working for yourself or for a society, you want to master the art of acting like a mermaid. This is where you get to be creative and theatrical. Essentially, the sirens are improvised actors. Play a character when you're a mermaid. Mersona is simply a game on person. It just means your mermaid character. You can be yourself or create an interesting mermaid identity separated from your human identity. Who are you in the queue? Are you a silly mermaid who doesn't understand the human world? Are you a magical being that you like to talk about mythology? Are you a mermaid who loves to sing beautiful songs? Are you an explorer who tells stories about your journeys through the seven seas? Are you a nature lover who wants to make a difference and help save animals and raise pollution? What's in a name? First you'll have to find your mermaid name. It can be as simple as your name with 'mermaid' before it, or use your location as part of your name, as 'The New Mexico Siren'. Another way to name yourself is to use whatever your niche is. For example, if the song of the work is part of your act, your title may be 'The Siren of the Work'. If you want something more interesting and unique you can find your mermaid name. It could be something significant for you, or just something you think sounds pretty good. You can get quite creative when it comes to names. Many siren names are based on oceanic elements. This means that it could be a variation of a word tied to the ocean, for example, Oceana or Marina. You can also look at different languages to find inspiration for your name. You don't want to steal someone else's name. Always check that a name is not already used by a well-known mermaid to avoid clichés too. Enter the character If you choose to create a distinct siren character rather than act like your human self, then you need to create a story/storypersonality for you. It should be unique. Include a source, some details about your life as a mermaid, and an explanation of how you got where you are. Try to avoid a dark background. You will also have to find some traits for your siren character. What are your interests and contempts like mermaid? What adjectives describe your personality? You may be a sparkling mermaid, an embossed mermaid, an inquisitive mermaid, or perhaps a wise mermaid. When you arrive with your mersona it is necessary to stick to it during an event. How to interact with children Children will ask you all the questions, they are very curious. You must be ready to give credible answers. Your answers must be imaginative. They want to know what you eat, where you come from, how you get around, that your favorite color is, and so much more! They may ask you about ocean life, so help you get some knowledge about marine biology. It makes for a fun experience if you can tell children about your fish friends and give them fun facts about the ocean and the marine creatures. Since the sirens generally come from the sea (it can also say that you live in a lake or river) it makes sense to know about it. Avoid talking about politics, religion, sexuality, tragedies and controversial topics. You don't mean something that could confuse or trouble children, or that parents might have a problem with. Try to keep things positive and hearty, sticking to acceptable topics that everyone can discuss. You want to be involved with the kids. If they are a little shy, invite them to touch the tail or to take with you a "child". Ask them questions, as if they were having a "fin-tastic" day, or if they ever met a mermaid before. Water punctures are common slang siren. Making comments on their clothes can be a good way to interact. If they have a mermaid or unicorn on their shirt you can comment that you like. You could also say "I saw a unicorn, right?" or tell them that the ocean has narwhals, which are like sea unicorns. If they have an ocean creature, like a sea horse, on their shirt or necklace you could tell them that it looks just like your pet sea horse. This opens up funny conversations and provides an opportunity for them to tell you about their pets. Just have fun with it and get creative! Working for you or working for someone else? Once you have had the necessary experience and have put your wallet together, you are ready to look for siren work. When it comes to being a professional siren you can either work for you or work for someone else. 1. There are many professionals to be your boss. You can set up your own program, choose how much you earn, and make all decisions yourself. It's your business and you can do it to be what you want. Thenegative is that it is much more responsibility, but hard work will pay if this is your passion. the first things before you will need a business plan. This isthat outlines your business goals, strategy, finance and structure. Here are some things that need to be considered when you start your business siren: Services that you will offer Prices Hours Marketing There are many expenses necessary to start your business. You must invest in a domain of the website, advertising, business cards, liability insurance, a siren tail, equipment, props and costumes. For a website, you must include your name and contact information, the services you offer along with their prices, photos and videos to demonstrate your skills and experience. Make sure you include the city you are in. Even if you are willing to travel anywhere, most people prefer to hire locally. It is important to remain active on social media. You should have an Instagram page, Facebook and make YouTube videos is a great way to promote yourself. A good option is to start your own business siren through a license / franchise that already made its test. This way you will learn from experienced sirens how to maximize your revenue, avoid beginner errors, and benefit from the notoriety of a brand known to grow your business locally. Check the Aquamermaid license program. We already have a dozen places all over North America. Having an experienced trainer you can call to ask your question at any time makes all the difference to entrepreneurs. Another option if you can't participate in a workout in person is an online workout to open your business siren in your city. Think about working for yourself, but not alone; you should build a team and network of other sirens and advisers. 2. Working for someone else Working for someone else can be easier as you do not need to worry about management. You just need to focus on playing fake siren concerts. There are many events entertainment companies to work. Many of them make small children's parties with princesses, sirens, or superheroes. Look for entertainment for parties near you. You can work for Aquamermaid! Join the map of the sirens and become a member of the Aquamermaid Performer Pod. We're always looking for new sirens. Contact Marielle at Marielle@aquamermaid.com. There are also companies that make events on a higher scale for adults. In these events, they can have a siren there for the environment. Contact your local event companies, send them your wallet, and a brief description of what you offer, and will keep you in mind for the next water-themed party. (You can get booked for fundraising, celebrity weddings, and product launches that way) Aquarium works are a great option for those who love to swim in their tail more than interact with people, even if aquarium siren havel meet and say hello sometimes. Most aquarium works will require SCUBA certified because they often use air tubes with regulators so that sirens can stay under water while they are able to get air. Wachee Weeks is one of the mostattractions sirens. Wachee Springs State Park is a park with water activities, catering and more important - sirens! They do shows of mermaid underwater with music and choreography. You can also check Circus Siren Pod, Ripley's Aquarium, Aqua Performance Group, Wreck Bar at B Ocean Resort and Las Vegas Silverton Aquarium. Many companies will keep the auditions where you can demonstrate your underwater skills. They want to see that you are able to perform in the water, can keep a face straight while holding the breath, can show different emotions, and can interact with the public through the body language. What is a professional mermaid salary? How much should you pay? An important price rule is to know exactly why you are loading a certain amount. You should be able to justify your prices to a customer. The sirens can do about 70K a year, depending on how they manage their business. The keystone markup is a calculation to estimate how much you should charge for event. You want to cover your personal costs while making a profit. You should calculate how much you have to spend by event, then multiply this by three. Factors that contribute to the price: How many hours the event is... You should pay for the hour, at the top of various commissions. Props- You can include additional costs for extra optional functions, such as a giant inflatable shell, a tank, a pool, a bubble machine, or any other object you use. Preparation If you have equipment or decorations to set, which should be incorporated into the price, along with entering the costume. Assistance Having someone help, bringing you to the queue or taking photos is another expense to include. Your tail- If the queue you use was very expensive then you can load more. The queue can be included in the total price. To calculate how much to load using this equation: Tail price/quanty years you will use it/# events per month/12 months. The final number should be the price to pay for the queue. If you paid $2500 for the queue, make 2 events a month, you will use that queue for 5 years. 3000/12 months/2events/5 years= $25 per gig to pay your investment queue. It's called amortization. Travel You should charge if you have to travel for over half an hour. It could be like 50 cents per mile plus. If you have parking in place, make sure to ask ahead if the responsible person can provide free parking. All these expenses must be listed on the invoice. Making an invoice can be done easily using a template from Microsoft Office Excel, Word or Paypal. Remember, if you use a credit card payment device, like Square, then there is usually a 2-4% processing fee. We like to use Zelle, a direct bank deposit service in the United States because there are no feesThe execution of sirens is challenging. Swimming in a tail can be tiring after a while since the siren swimming is a good exercise. The legs can get painful and monofins can get uncomfortable on the feet. feet.in the eyes is painful, and the water is sometimes cold. You're still a human being under that tail and you have basic needs. For a longer event, you will have to take a break. A thumb rule is to take a 15-minute break every 1.5 hours, especially if you are running into the water. Don't forget to pay taxes for your mermaid earnings!!! It's not a bad idea to hire an accountant to help manage finances and teach you how to save money. Another thing you will have to invest in is the accountability insurance performer, which could be $200 a year. A responsibility insurance for swimming school varies from $800-1500 per year. Price reference: The current prices for a professional mermaid look like this. If you book directly with the customer, it is about $250/hour. If you are hired by a company of events like mermaid, it will be $50-150/hour. If you work regularly as a mermaid performer in an aquarium, you will earn $15-50 / now. Your experience, certification and costume can affect how much you get paid, but not be too greedy and remember there are many more sirens than available jobs. You need to offer reasonable prices and highlight what makes you unique compared to all other sirens out there. A good way to get more bookings is to offer different packages such as bronze, silver and gold at different price points, so that more customers can afford your services according to their budget. You can offer more hours, more sirens, videophoto service, and mermaid tail gifts for participants. I would highly recommend volunteering at first to get some experience and gradually increase your tax every few months while you are building your notoriety, portfolio, and demand for your services. Marielle's initial rate was $75/hour and now after 5 years of experience, she costs $250 per hour. How to find professional mermaid work Join the mermaid map - A Aquamermaid we get many demands of mermaids in all different positions. We have created a world map showing several sirens in each area. If someone asks for a siren in a specific area where it is located, we can reach you. This map is not public. It is only for private use Aquamermaid, but you can apply here to join our performers. Get listed on other websites- Sometimes you need to pay to be listed on a website showing professional sirens for rental in the area, but it is a great way to get discovered and get concerts. For example, on Gigsalad you can list yourself as a performer. Reach the sirens in the area... If there are sirens near you, contact them and see if they ever want to cooperate, or if they need extra sirens ever. Get Online Ads -Online ads are a great way to get business. Someone who has never heard of sirens could stumble on your ad and decide to make a siren party for their child. Concentrate locally and test a variety of photos and copy of ads. Make sure you can monitor sales on yourBecause you need to be able to track where sales come from if you are opting for paid ads. *Important: Do not sign an exclusive agreement; it blocks you from getting your concerts in addition to working for someone else from time to time. Sign only an exclusive contract if the contract gives you full-time work. You have to put yourself there to succeed as a professional mermaid. Remember, it takes time to reach your goals. You must be patient and persistent. Don't be discouraged if it takes a long time to get mermaid jobs. Stay optimistic and work hard and you will fulfill your dreams in time. We hope this guide has been useful for you on your siren journey! This blog post was co-written by Olivia Gilbert
