In living color fly girl dancers

Dancer and television host Carrie Ann Inaba has been a Dancing With The Stars judge since its first season back in '05. However, her acting credits go way beyond DWTS. Here are some of her other roles that you might not have known about. Screenshot via YouTube In a 2009 episode of Disney's Hannah Montana, Inaba plays a choreographer named Tina. In the 2002 movie Austin Powers in Goldmember, Carrie Ann Inaba plays a Harajuku twin, Fook Yu. She also played a dancer in the 1999 movie Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me. 'In Living Color' Everett Collection The comedy series from the early 90s, In Living Color featured many dancers, including J. Lo and of course, Carrie Ann Inaba! In the 1995 film Showgirls, Carrie Ann Inaba is one of the Goddess Dancers that takes the stage alongside the movie's protagonist, Nomi. Disney - ABC Domestic Television, 'Nashville' In the CMT drama series Nashville, Carrie Ann Inaba appears as herself while one of the show's characters, Rayna Jaymes, is asked to sing on a fictional country-themed episode of Dancing With The Stars. Guest stars Chris Rock was never an official cast member on In Living Color, but did appear (as a "special guest star") in a number of skits in the fifth season, and reprised his "Cheap Pete" character from I'm Gonna Git You Sucka. In the early years of In Living Color, Rock was parodied as being the only African American cast member on Saturday Night Live (SNL also had Tim Meadows and Ellen Cleghorne). In an SNL skit honoring Mother's Day, Rock's mother jokes that she is disappointed in him for being on SNL, and asks "Has In Living Color called yet?" (and later, when Adam Sandler hosted, Chris Rock sang about how he got fired from SNL and kicked off In Living Color when the latter show got canceled). Other recurring guest stars in the fifth season include show writer Nick Bakay (for The Dirty Dozens sketches) and Peter Marshall (ringmaster for several urban parodies of Hollywood Squares). Rapper Biz Markie also appeared in various roles as a guest star in the fifth season, such as being (not too much) in drag as Wanda the Ugly Woman's sister or as "Dirty Dozens" contestant Damian "Foosball" Franklin. Fly Girls (house dance troupe) The Fly Girls troupe had various members over In Living Color's five-season run. The original lineup consisted of Cari French, Carrie Ann Inaba, Deidre Lang, Lisa Marie Todd, and Michelle Whitney-Morrison. Rosie Perez was the choreographer for the first four seasons. Sometimes the Fly Girls could be used as extras in sketches, or be part of an opening gag (in one sketch, they were shown performing open-heart surgery and revealed that they were dancing in order to pay their way through medical school), though, mostly, the Fly Girls appeared in commercial break bumpers and filler scenes in between sketches (not unlike the bikini-clad female cast members on Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In). In the fifth season Arthur Rainer became the main choreographer with Lisa Joann Thompson and Deidre Lang as assistant choreographers. When Keenan Ivory Wayans was approached by Fox to create a series for the fledgling TV network in 1989, he was told he could develop any kind of comedy show he wanted. Instead of going the sitcom route, he produced his own version of "Saturday Night Live". Calling it "In Living Color", the title was a nod to television past and present, recalling the "In living color!" announcement that preceded color TV programs in the 1950s while highlighting the show's predominantly non-white cast. But while "In Living Color" was influenced by SNL, Wayans veered away from straight-up sketch comedy; he wanted his series to be a contemporary update on old-fashioned variety shows, but "with a hip-hop flavor". So in lieu of a house band, there was DJ SW1 (Shawn Wayans) spinning rap, R&B, and new jack swing tracks. And inspired by Jackie Gleason's June Taylor Dancers, he brought in the Fly Girls, an energetic street dance squad that opened each episode and performed between sketches. The original Fly Girl troupe included Carrie Ann Inaba (now of 'Dancing with the Stars'), Deidre Lang, Cari French, Lisa Marie Todd, and Michelle Whitney-Morrison (Jennifer Lopez, the most famous Fly Girl, didn't enter the picture until season 3). Actresses Tisha Campbell and A.J. Johnson, fresh off their co-starring roles in 1990's 'House Party', choreographed the pilot. But by the third episode, Rosie Perez, who was more immersed in the hip-hop scene, took over. Perez's work with the Fly Girls went beyond just choreography, she also chose and edited their music and crafted their image. The dancers were all technically trained but had not practiced street dance, so she had to teach them how to do it, a task that initially created tension between master and students. Perez used fly back and forth from LA — where 'In Living Color' was taped — to NYC, where she crawled hip-hop clubs to scope out the latest dance styles to bring back to the show. As 'In Living Color' took off in its first season, so did the Fly Girls. And it wasn't just their choreography that young women began to emulate — they also became known for their style, which the LA Times dubbed "the best fashion show on television". Costume designer Michelle Cole (who currently works on 'Black'ish') avoided dressing the girls in an overly sexy manner, instead working more androgynous looks that she described as 'A little bit of girl and a little bit of boy.' Body con dresses were worn with Dr. Martens, lace bustiers with baggy jeans, ballet skirts with biker shorts. Outfits needed to be infinitely danceable, which meant clothes that were either stretchy or roomy, and always worn with flat shoes. Like Perez, Cole visited nightclubs for inspiration. She mixed pieces from local LA labels like Helios, Van Buren, and Sqwear with cheap thrift store jewelry. Athletic-wear was also a go-to, with the dancers dressing in boxing trunks and bra tops, cut-off football pants, and day-glo cycling gear. The Fly Girl look was a maximalist's dream come true — studded bras, fishnet stockings, slouchy socks, elbow gloves, floppy flower hats, backwards suspenders, often worn all together and spanning the entire spectrum of Crayola's 64-count crayon box, dressing the part |dope super fresh 5 videos| the r's and b's of grunge From 1990 to 1994, the sketch comedy show In Living Color was making us laugh with its hilarious take on pop culture, society, and current events. But the beginning of the show, and what served as a musical intermission, was all about the Fly Girls.These ladies, among them celebs Carrie Ann Inaba and Jennifer Lopez, delivered all the best, latest '90s dance moves — choreographed by Rosie Perez — all while dressed in the trendiest, coolest clothes (thanks to costume designer Michelle Cole). Since all things '90s are on-trend right now, and have been for a while, we wanted to celebrate these multi-cultural ladies and their badass fashion, with a breakdown of their iconic style. And, of course, we are including where you can shop each throwback item today!BodysuitsA very '90s garment that was worn on In Living Color by the Fly Girls is the bodysuit. It allowed the ladies to dance while still maintaining the look of a sleek top tucked into pants, shorts, or a skirt. The bodysuit is one of the 1990s pieces that have come back in style in the 2010s, and beyond.Where to Buy: Fashion Nova Melinna Long Sleeve Bodysuit, available at fashionnova.com, $24.99Velvet thing you'll see pop up on Fly Girl fashion quite a bit is velvet. During the '90s, this fabric added a luxe touch to clothing, accessories, and shoes. And based on the '90s revival, it's not going anywhere soon.Where to Buy: Dolls Kill Nighttime Nonsense Velvet Crop Top, available at dollskill.com, $45Striped pants 2020 trend that was also a 1990s trend is the vertical striped pants (and stripes in general). The style shown here on the Fly Girls is high-waisted and belted into a paper bag style, but you can rock vertical stripes in a silhouette that works best for you.Where to Buy: boohoo Black and White Stripe High Rise Mom Jean, available at boohoo.com, $46ChokersChokers are a major '90s trend that has made its way back into the latest fashion. After a small pause, the color-fitting necklaces are back, and bolder than ever. In fact, you'll see many chunky, gold-link chokers everywhere, like the one worn by Jennifer Lopez on In Living Color.Where to Buy: Windsor So Extra Chain Link Necklace, available at windsorstore.com, $13.90Lace-Up BootsAnother chunky accessory from the '90s you'll see everywhere for 2020 is the lace-up boot. The Fly Girls wore these statement shoes during several of their performances, and they give edge to everything, from feminine skirts and dresses, to casual jeans and shorts.Where to Buy: Timberland 6-Inch Premium Waterproof Boot, available at nordstrom.com, $169.95Crop Tops Fly Girls rocked many a crop top. They donned short blouses, bustiers, sports bras, and cropped tees. The style usually was to wear them with baggy, belted jeans; belted slacks; biker shorts; and the like.Where to Buy: ASOS DESIGN long sleeve square neck crop top in stripe, available at asos.com, $19Hoops hoops are a mainstay in our jewelry box, but the '90s really embraced the earrings, and they're currently having a fashion moment now as well. The bold earrings just add that attitude, edge, and style to any outfit they're worn with, while also serving as a neutral, go-with-anything accessory.Where to Buy: Target Large Hoop Earrings - Wild Fable™, available at target.com, $6'90s Jeans in the '90s, the jeans were baggy enough to really dance in. The Fly Girls wore high-waist, light denim, sometimes cuffed as seen here, and belted for extra style.Where to Buy: BDG High-Waisted Mom Jean - Light Wash, available at urbanoutfitters.com, $59Bustier TopsSelena wasn't the only stylish chica wearing bustier tops during the 1990s. The Fly Girls were also in on the trend, wearing everything from full-length bustiers, to the cropped ones, to more of the decorative bra-style version.Where to Buy: Lulus Electrifying Love Black Bustier Crop top, available at lulus.com, $32Body-Con Dresses wouldn't have been the '90s without tight, body-con dresses that showed off every curve. The Fly Girls definitely were in on this trend, and wore snug dresses in all sorts of colors and styles. The classic scoop neck body-con dress is a definite wardrobe staple that be worn alone, or as a chic layering piece.Where to Buy: City Chic Plus Size Body-Con Tank Dress, available at nordstrom.com $69GlovesThe Fly Girls would wear gloves, both opera length and short, to add sass and style to their various outfits. They were especially fun in pops of color like purple. With all the '90s clothing that is back in style, you can opt to add some gloves for an unexpected, feminine touch.Where to Buy: BABEYOND Long Opera Party 20s Satin Gloves Stretchy Adult Size Elbow Length 15 Inches, available at amazon.com, $8.99Leggings are everywhere, and for good reason. The stretchy pants that everyone also rocked in the '90s, including the Fly Girls, are super comfortable, sleek, and go with just about everything. The Fly Girls, as seen above, would dare to wear printed leggings to add some detail and interest to solid and mostly-solid blazers.Off-the-Shoulder Tops and DressesPhoto: Jean Krettler/eBayWhether it was in chic black, or a more-is-more floral print, the '90s featured tons of off-the-shoulder tops and dresses. These would be worn as is, or layered under vests for some layered cool.Where to Buy: White House Black Market Floral Burnout Off-the-Shoulder Blouse , available at whitehouseblackmarket.com, $26.99'90s HatsPhoto: Michael Lavine/eBayAccessories were a huge part of the 1990s aesthetic, and the first things many people grab today to recreate particular throwback looks. One major '90s accessory is the hat, and there are a lot to choose from. The Fly Girls were wearing pretty hats with a big flower in the front; newsboy hats; bucket hats; and the 5-panel hats cyclists wear, with the brim up.Where to Buy: FLUFFSHOPVINTAGE 90s Art Student Purple Velvet Slouchy Parisian Artist Beret - New w Original Tags, available at etsy.com, $20.94ShortsStylish shorts allowed the Fly Girls to be on trend, plus have room to do those amazing dance moves.
