Is the washing machine secure for baby stuff? Ask a seasoned mom or dad This question, and you will probably have a very clear answer in sturmeal. You will find very few parents who will not shudder to the idea of hand washing, they say, cloth diapers. Elastic, yes, it's perfectly safe to throw your child's clothes, sheets, cloth diapers and blankets in your trusted washing machine. The machine itself will not make any damage (provided that the clothing is not, for example, a sewing dress by hand, silk baptism). However, what you put in the car along with that clothing can import quite a while, especially when it comes to detergents. It should come as no surprise to feel that detergents that remove blood from a white shirt may contain some hard chemicals. Those chemicals could be perfectly beautiful for the skin, but they can be quite difficult about your brand new child, which is very sensitive to additives such as dyes and aromas and strong detergents that can cause irritation. Make sure your detergent is safe for the child, look for one that is very mild. This could mean one specifically made for children (they usually say right on the front of the container) or a regular detergent that is devoid of dyes and perfumes and states that it is hypoallergenic. Some experts also recommend the choice of liquids on dust, since it can dissolve and rinse more easily. You should probably skip the fabric softener and dryers, since they can also contain hard chemicals. The other important concern for children is the unique type of deposits that you will find on their clothing - yes, poop and not just on diapers - which should always be washed separately. In case of unfortunate, even the trousers and clothes can end up to the point. But it can also finish filed on other clothing. So, in addition to washing vomit and dirty objects of vomit separately, you also want to be sure to wash everything in hottest temperatures (above 140 degrees fahrenheit / 60 degrees Celsius), add a luminous disinfectant as your delicate detergent does not contain Probably bleach, and ironically, wash the washing machine. Especially if you typically use lower washing temperatures for efficiency and color savings, perform an empty washing on hot and adding candgius once a week. This should kill any germs or bacteria (or even powder mites) that could have collected in the machine. Simple, overall. And for greater security and efficacy, you can follow some additional tips ... one of the first things that people notice you is what you wear. This doesn't just mean the style and clothes clothes, but also how clean and new, or dirty and worn these clothes. Because our clothes are so important to us, we put a lot of energy to keep them clean. The most common way we favor our clothes and linen is wet cleaning, or the use of water and some kind of soap. On the contrary, dry cleaning uses chemicals or ultrasonic devices to loosen and remove dirt and spots without water. While dry cleaning is usually performed at professional dry cleaner stores, wet cleaning is usually made at home or in a self-service-service laundry. The washing machine itself has become an important part of creating a home, and doing the laundry is probably Of a regular routine for you and your family. We did a long way to automate the laundry work.
