Guibourg mass by Henry de Malvost, from the book Le Satanisme et La Magie by Jules Bois, Paris, 1903 A black mass is a ceremony typically celebrated by several Satanic groups. Allegedly there were semi-cells in different forms and is based directly on a catalic mass. [1] In the XIX, the black mass became popularized in the French literature, in books such as Satanism and Spituation, by Jules Michelet, and Wool Bas, by Joris-Karl Huysmans. Modern revivals began with Book H. T. F. Rhodes' The Satanic Mass published in London in 1954, and now there is a range of modern versions of the black Mass held by several groups. Early Catholicism History The Catholic Church considers mass as its most important ritual, returning to apostallic times. In general, his various liturgies followed the contour of the Liturgy of the Word, the liturgy, the liturgy of the Eucharist, and the "nit, which developed in what is known as Mass. However, as early Christianity became more established and its influence began to spread, the first fathers of the Church began to describe some herentic groups practicing their own mass versions. Some of these rituals were of sexual nature. [2] Salamis Epiphanius Epiphanius Heresiologist, for example, states that a libertine gnotal sect known as the borks engaged in a version of the Eucharist in which they rub their hands with menstrual blood and sermen and consumed them as the blood and body of Christ respectively. [3] He also claims that, whenever one of the women in his church was experiencing his period, they would lead his menstrual blood and everyone in the church would commence him as part of a sacred ritual. [4] Medieval Roman Catholic Parades and Adições to the Mass Sixteenth Woodcut Representing Black Mass Inside the Church, the rite of the Mass was not completely fixed, and there were places at the end of the offer for the secret prayers, When the priest could insert private prayers for various personal needs. These practices have become particularly prevalent in the franchise (see mass-tridentin). As these types of personal prayers within mass dissemination, the institution of low mass became quite common, where priests would hire their services to carry out various masses for the needs of its clients (votive masses) - such as benches or cattle, achieving success in some company, obtaining love, or even loving enemies (a way to have been made was inserting the name of the enemy in a mass For the dead, accompanied by burying an image of the enemy). In 12 and 13 months there was a large surplus of clan and monks that may be inclined to carry out these masses, as younger children were often sent to religious universities, and after their studies, need to find a subsistence. Also inside the church, Mass was sometimes reworked to create a light hearted parades for certain church festivities. Some of them have become accepted at least sometimes, as a festive parade of the mass called "The Asses Feast", in which the butt of Balaam (of the Old Testament) would begin to talk and say parts of the dough. A similar parade was the feast of fools. Another result of the surplus of clerical students (sometimes disillusioned) was the appearance of the Latin writings of Goliards and Clerics Wandering (Vagantant Clerici). He began to look after the most cynical and herestic parades of the dough, also written in Ecclesiática Latin, known as "drinkers'" masses "and" masses of players, "which lamented the situations of Beds, monks of play and instead of calling "God" (God), called the "bacchus" (the god of wine) and " "(The god of the data, which were used à € à € à €
